Monoprint series – drawings on water colour experiments exploring the theme of Sense of Place

Students will create and design their own drawings from their personal understanding of the theme and of how colours can represent different Australian landscapes. Students will be introduced to the print media process of monoprinting, creating drawings in monoprints layered over their watercolour experiments.

What you need to do

Inquiry
- Create a visual brainstorm around the concept of home, using collage, drawing and text.
- Look at different images of Australian landscapes and houses.
- Respond to the following questions: Where do you live, near the beach/bushland? What makes you feel at home, family, belongings?
- Draw own representations of home. Use a visual brainstorm, images or direct observations of landscapes or objects.

Art forms, media and techniques
- Experiment with coloured inks or watercolour paints, creating colour blending to represent different Australian landscapes; for example, ocean: blue hues, bushland: green hues, desert: orange hues.
- Look at Australian printmaker Margaret Preston’s artworks and how she creates artworks from the world around her: her home, Australian landscapes and objects in her home.

Art practice
- Create a monoprint, using initial drawings of home as a reference point. Using an inked up sheet of plastic (polyethylene), draw into the ink using rags or cotton buds. Focus on the lines and movements they create in the ink to portray the image.
- Print the monoprint onto the colour experiments previously made to create a small series of work.

Your progress in this task will be documented in the following ways:
- student visual brainstorm related to theme
- student drawings related to theme for design work
- student water colour experiments, blending colours
- teacher observational notes on student’s use of media
- student print experimentation
- student production work – print series.

Monoprinting

Monoprinting is a printmaking process in which a drawing or painting is created on a flat, unworked printing plate or other surface. The ink is transferred, through pressure, on to a sheet of paper. Only one strong impression can be taken, hence the term monoprint.

Books

- Printmaking handbook, Printmaking for Beginners by Jane Stobart
- Printmaking handbook, Monoprinting by Jackie Newell & Dee Whittington

Contact local print media artists for insight in to different printing techniques. Arrange a school visit for students to meet and learn from a professional printmaking artist.

Conditions
Time for the task: throughout unit
Period allowed for completion of the task: 16 weeks

Reflection – students continually reflect on process of creating artwork based on the theme of Sense of Place

Students will review progress achievements and success as an individual and a group to learn and improve artwork.

What you need to do

Art responses
• Reflect on individual and/or group artworks completed thus far. What do their prints have in common with their peers’ and with the artists they have studied?
• Respond to artworks referring to basic visual language; for example, line, colour, shape, form, texture and/or tone, what has worked effectively, what have students enjoyed?
• Discuss meaning and purpose in artworks; do they portray a ‘sense of place’, home, what are some ways to improve?
• Look at all prints created thus far; reflect on individual body of work.
• Respond to artworks referring to basic visual language; for example, line, colour, shape, form, texture and/or tone.
• Discuss ideas and personal thoughts and opinions on each artwork. Record key words from discussion; use these to create titles for each series of prints.
• Reflect on individual body of work; students consider ways to further improve or change their artworks.
• Reflect on individual and/or group achievements throughout the semester, what they enjoyed, what artwork is their favourite, do they understand the ideas explored, do they have personal stories linked to the artworks they have made?
• Create notes or recordings of students’ reflections to be used as artist statements to accompany the artwork on display.

Your progress in this task will be documented in the following ways:
• audio/video of individual and group reflection when responding to artworks
• teacher observational notes on student reference to elements of visual art and principles of design in responding to an artwork
• recorded discussion on the meaning and purpose of artwork in relation to overall theme of Sense of Place
• student’s notes for individual reflection
• record of final reflection in written or audio format to be used as artist statement for artwork on display
• teacher observation notes on student reference to elements of visual art and principles of design in own artwork.
